The School of Law’s Dynamic Legal Clinicians
Leaders in Legal Training and Service

Speakers: Past and Present

Mural Installation of United States Constitution
Fond Farewells
Table of Contents

Readings & Features

4  Letter from the Dean

5  True to Our Mission...Looking to the Future

8  Preparing Practice Ready Lawyers

The Legal Clinics

9  Veterans Law Clinic

10 Civil Litigation Clinic

11 Domestic Violence Clinic

12 Criminal Defense Clinic

13 Family Law Clinic

14 Juvenile Law Clinic

15 Small Business Clinic

16 Intellectual Property Clinic

The Institutes

24  Biotechnology and Pharmaceutical Law Institute

Faculty News

25  Adjuncts Adding Value to the Law School Experience

26  Adjunct Profile

27  New and Visiting Faculty

28  Faculty Profiles

At School Now

34  Fond Farewells

35 Dean’s Reception Celebrates Bar Passage

36  Graduation: Class of 2010

38  Civil Rights Documents Donated to NCCU

38  Law School Hosts Annual D.C. Luncheon

News & Notes

17  Center for Child and Family Health

20  Mural Installation

21  Speakers Past & Present

Giving

39  Letter from the Alumni President

40  Alumni News

46  Donor List

We welcome your comments, suggestions and ideas for future articles or alumni news. Please send correspondence to:

Marcia R. Ballard
NCCU School of Law
640 Nelson Street
Durham, North Carolina 27707
email: mballard@nccu.edu
website: web.nccu.edu/law

Dean:
Raymond C. Pierce

Director of Development:
Delores James

Editor:
Marcia R. Ballard

Copy Editor:
Brenda Gibson ’95

Design & Illustration:
Kompleks Creative

Printer:
Progressive Business Solutions

Photography:
Tobias Rose for Kompleks Creative

Writers & Contributors:
Sharon D. Alston
Felicia Branch
Shawanda Brown
Jennifer Boush
Todd Clark
Pamela Stansberry Glean ’80
Donna Goodner-Stanley
Deva Phillip Hayes ’98
The Honorable James T. Hill
Craig Kahrschnick
Wendy Brown Scott
Clintus Halks, 3L

of Counsel is published by the NCCU School of Law for alumni, friends and members of the legal community.

Pictured: School of Law Library

Front Cover: (Center) Pamela Glean ’80, Assistant Dean for Clinical and Professional Skills, with law students, clinical faculty and staff on the steps of the Durham County Judicial Building in downtown Durham.

Back Cover: 2011 NCCU Lincoln Inn of Court: (Left) Verona D. Jeter ’89, President; (center) Pamela Glean ’80, Assistant Dean for Clinical and Professional Skills; (right) Robert L. Goodwin, Jr. ’68, Dean Emeritus of the NCCU School of Law.

Pamela Glean ’80, Assistant Dean for Clinical and Professional Skills, with law students, clinical faculty and staff on the steps of the Durham County Judicial Building in downtown Durham.
North Carolina Central University School of Law has earned its designation as an established leader in legal education. The high quality presence of our alumni in the practicing bar, the judiciary, and in government service is the greatest testimony to the Law School’s firm standing within the world of legal education. The Law School’s commitments to stellar classroom instruction, supported by our nationally ranked clinical legal education programs, combine to produce exceptionally well-prepared and practice-ready attorneys. Clinical legal education, without question, contributes substantially toward the preparation of young attorneys in their ability to provide effective legal service.

Operated by seasoned and dedicated members of our Law School faculty, the Clinic at NCCU School of Law is one of the finest clinical programs in the nation. As an established fixture in providing public service, our Clinic has a clear and meaningful impact that also reinforces the mission of the Law School to provide attorneys ready and prepared to serve the legal needs of their community.

Further, the development of our Technology Assisted Legal Instruction and Services (TALIAS) project gives us increased ability to extend our clinical services to remote communities while enhancing the practical skills development of our students. You will read more about TALIAS in this magazine. You will also read more about our clinical program and the wonderful opportunity it provides in preparing graduates for practice while serving real needs in our community.

In addition, with regard to national rankings, I am very proud to announce that in March of this year NCCU School of Law was named one of the nation’s 10 “Most Popular” law schools in a ranking released by U.S. News & World Report. The listing is based on an analysis of admission yield — the percentage of students accepted by a school who choose to enroll. In the rankings compiled for 2010, NCCU School of Law placed ninth, with a yield of 49.6 percent, of 415 applicants accepted by the school, 206 subsequently enrolled.

Finally, Prelaw Magazine ranked NCCU School of Law in the top 25 Best Public Interest Law Schools. As this ranking supports, and we as a law school recognize, the role of practical skills training continues to be elevated in national discussions regarding legal education.

Raymond C. Pierce
Dean and Professor of Law

Breaking Records

2010 proved to be a banner year for the NCCU Clinical Legal Education Program. We closed the academic year in May with a record number of clinics and a record enrollment of students for 252 placements in our clinical and skills courses. Ultimately, we provided a record high of $1,994,375 in free legal services to indigent individuals, nonprofits, pro bono and government agencies, corporations, and private law firms in the community. Remarkable is the term that comes to mind when I try to describe our success. We were very proud to report these developments, and although it was May, it soon became apparent that our year had just begun.

New Grants - New Clinics - New Technology

The spring and summer of 2010 marked our most active year for grant applications.

Assistant Dean Adrienne Meddock applied to the United States Patent and Trademark Office for privileges under its Trademark Law School Certification Program. In July, we were notified that NCCU was one of only 10 law schools that made a successful application. We now boast an Intellectual Property Clinic that will assist people with trademark applications.

Pro Bono Director Page Potter’s Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Program (VITA) attracted the attention of Southern University’s Path to Financial Independence Project, sponsored by a grant from The Kellogg Foundation. As a subcontractor, our VITA program will incorporate information on financial education and asset building into our current activities.

“Whether what courtroom you are in, in North Carolina and beyond its borders, you can tell the NCCU law student. They don’t have to open their mouths. It’s the way they carry themselves.”

- The Honorable Pat Evans, District Court Judge and Double Eagle, Women’s Law Caucus Luncheon Speaker, March 21, 2010

I am proud to share with you some of the stories that helped produce the confident young attorneys that Durham County’s newest District Court Judge, Pat Evans, was referring to when she made the above statement. The experiences that shape these young professionals are quite inspiring.

But before you read their stories, let me share with you some of the exciting things that have happened recently with the Legal Clinic.

“New clinic

- Intellectual Property Clinic that will assist people with trademark applications.
- Pro Bono Program
- Elizabeth Peter
- Small Business and Community Development Clinic
- Felicia Branch
- Veterans Law Clinic
- Craig Kuhnchen
- New clinics

Of Counsel - Readings and Features
Of Counsel / Readings and Features

A Special Visitor
Will Gunn, General Counsel for the United States Department of Veterans Affairs (VA), along with NCCU Law alum Steven Radom ’86, visited the Law School on August 31, 2010. During their visit, they chatted with Professor Charles Smith, Veterans Law Clinic Director Craig Kabatchnick, and several Veterans Law Clinic students. The conversation centered on students’ motivation for taking the Clinic and career possibilities in the VA. What a special opportunity for our students!

As you can see, 2010 was a successful year. What are the keys to our success? Here are a few.

True to Our Mission
Every day we pursue our mission to train law students to be sensitive to the needs of the underserved, no matter what professional goals they seek to obtain. The growth of the Law School is not just in numbers, but also in the breadth of social, educational, and professional backgrounds of the students we serve. The Legal Clinic constantly monitors the state of the legal profession and strives to provide a vast array of clinical opportunities that support the diverse interests and professional goals of our students.

Team Spirit
This term is not just for athletics. If you walk down the hallways of our Legal Clinic, you can feel it.

We are a lively, eclectic group. Young and not so young, black, white, Hispanic, Native American, Jewish, Christian, Gentrile, male, female; we are literally and figuratively “all over the place.” It is not unusual to find us in the offices of one another, discussing the latest case, or giving and receiving advice on litigation strategy and teaching methodology. Our diverse backgrounds stimulate thoughtful, in-depth discussions. We are happy to have this responsibility and it shows.

We laugh loudly and often. Our students and colleagues often comment about “those people in the Clinic.” We consider our students a part of our team, especially the interns. We are grateful for most decided to open their own practice. These minority graduates continued to face racial discrimination and strives to provide a vast array of clinical opportunities that support the diverse interests and professional goals of our students.

Institutional Support
Many years before 1992, when the American Bar Association issued its MacCrate Report encouraging the practical experience of law students while enrolled in law school, our clinical program enjoyed the support of both the Law School and university administrations. As late as the 1970s, our minority graduates continued to face racial discrimination as they entered the profession and most decided to open their own practice. These inexperienced practitioners lacked the mentoring and readiness that many white lawyers enjoyed post graduation. In response to this dilemma, exposure to the practical skills necessary to succeed in the practice of law became a critical objective for NCCU Law. With university support, practical skills programs were developed with federal grants and state grants. Over the years, funding for most of these programs was absorbed into the state operational budget, which created the financial insecurity required to attract highly qualified, dedicated faculty and staff.

It is ironic that the discrimination that required NCCU Law to create a practical skills curriculum in the early 1970s provided the foundation for this historically black law school to become a nationally recognized leader in practical skills training and legal services to clients in and around Durham. That same support continues to be the foundation for a level of service to the community that is unmatched by any other law school in the state and by very few in the nation.

Pamela Stanback Glean ’80
Assistant Dean for Clinical and Professional Skills
B.A., Duke University
J.D., NCCU School of Law
I have been a District Court Judge in Durham County since December 1, 2002. Since taking the bench, I have had the pleasure of presiding over many cases whose students from NCCU School of Law have appeared before me from the various clinical programs (mostly from the Criminal Litigation Clinic as interns with the District Attorney and Public Defender).

While in law school, I was the beneficiary of clinical practice. I attended Cumberland School of Law in Birmingham, Alabama, graduating in 1976. I was in the first class that was allowed to participate in the third-year practice act in Alabama. I believe that Cumberland was on the cutting edge of clinical legal education. After being in the classroom for two years, it was exciting and nerve-wracking to be allowed in a real courtroom with real cases and real clients (being able to put into practice what I had learned). When I talked with my first client, I am sure I was more nervous than he was. At that point, I learned that sometimes clients could be less than truthful with their lawyers.

Law school teachers you law. Hopefully, it prepares you to pass the bar exam. But then what? A new attorney may know the law but may not know how to practice law. Those with a clinical background are ahead of the curve. However, I suggest that new lawyers find an experienced attorney to observe and mentor them. New lawyers should not be afraid to ask questions. Mistakes will be made. It is important for new lawyers to understand that the tragedy is in not learning from your mistakes. The clerk and bailiffs can also be a lot of help to a new attorney. They are in the courtroom more than anyone. They can give practical insights into the inner workings of the courtroom and tendencies of the judge. (Yes, we judges are human and have similar responses to similar cases and situations).

Clinical legal education is becoming more common in all of our law schools, both locally and nationally. They are a vital component of a good legal education to properly train and educate lawyers to be effective advocates for their clients. I can say without reservation that in my eight years on the bench, NCCU has been leading the way in the Research Triangle in this area. NCCU should be proud of the "practice-ready" lawyers it is producing.

The Honorable James T. Hill is a District Court Judge for the 14th Judicial District of North Carolina. He was elected to the District Court bench in 2002.

The Veterans Law Clinic is one of the first law clinics in the country that has a legal program as unique and respected as the NCCU Veteran's Law Clinic. The idea of a legal clinic for veterans originated with me, and the late Judge Robinson Everett. The clinic opened its doors in January 2007.

The response to this clinic has been outstanding, and the benefits of a Veteran Law Clinic located in a state with such a large veteran and military personnel population is obvious. The students work diligently with veterans to help them maneuver the Veterans Administration (VA) claims adjudication process. Students advocate for further medical examinations when needed, and ensure that the VA applies its broadened duty to assist veterans in the development of their claim, as required by law. Some cases are appealed to the U.S. Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims.

Craig Kabatchnick
Director, Veterans Law Clinic
B.S., Political Science, University of Scranton
J.D., George Washington University
School of Law

Last year, I and clinic student Patrick Fitzsimmons ’10 represented a veteran and his spouse at a hearing before the Board of Veteran Appeals. The veteran was a member of the Marine Corp’s Company C, 1st Battalion, 8th Marines (C/1/8). On April 18, 1953, the Marine Corp’s Battalion mission was aborted due to excessive radiation exposure “specifically a 25 kiloton tower atomic shot” during Operation Upshot-Knothole in Nevada. After the detonation, the battalion continued the mission and was exposed to radiation.

Over the years, the veteran suffered from bone death—bilateral auricular necrosis of the femoral head and skin cancer. Suspecting that his diseases were related to his service in the Marines, the client began to maneuver the claims process without representation by an attorney. The Department of Veteran Affairs denied the claim for benefits, asserting that the diseases were not related to the radiation exposure in 1953. Unsuccessful for approximately 29 years, the veteran finally sought the assistance of the Veterans Law Clinic.

Fitzsimmons was particularly qualified for this assignment. Before she entered law school, Fitzsimmons received a Ph.D. in Inorganic Chemistry from Wake Forest University, and a B.S. in Biochemistry from the State University of New York-Buffalo. In addition, she had experience working for the Environmental Protection Agency and Bayer Corporation, Division of Biological Products, and possessed a vast knowledge of radiation biology.

The Clinic fought for a hearing. At the hearing, Fitzsimmons and I presented medical records to support the veteran’s claim and Fitzsimmons’ extensive background allowed her to explain the research in this area. The result was a successful argument that the veteran’s skin cancer was due to the radiation from the nuclear blast, which was as much as 4000 times the estimate first indicated by the government.

This case was the first time that the Board of Veteran’s Appeals had ever granted benefits to a veteran exposed to radiation during a test site nuclear blast such as the one that occurred during Operation Upshot-Knothole in April 1953. Unfortunately, the celebration of this victory was short-lived. The veteran died in 2010. But because of the Veterans Law Clinic success, his widow now has benefits to support her.

Craig Kabatchnick
Director, Veterans Law Clinic
B.S., Political Science, University of Scranton
J.D., George Washington University
School of Law

North Carolina Central University School of Law is one of the few law schools in the country that has a legal program as unique and respected as the NCCU Veteran’s Law Clinic. The idea of a legal clinic for veterans originated with me, and the late Judge Robinson Everett. The clinic opened its doors in January 2007.

The response to this clinic has been outstanding, and the benefits of a Veteran Law Clinic located in a state with such a large veteran and military personnel population is obvious. The students work diligently with veterans to help them maneuver the Veterans Administration (VA) claims adjudication process. Students advocate for further medical examinations when needed, and ensure that the VA applies its broadened duty to assist veterans in the development of their claim, as required by law. Some cases are appealed to the U.S. Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims.
11

CIVIL LITIGATION CLINIC

REDRESSING THE WRONGED

In 2008, as media reports surfaced about the subprime mortgage meltdown and rampant predatory lending practices by lenders, 64-year-old Annie Smith (not her real name) sought legal assistance from NCCU’s Civil Litigation Clinic. Ms. Smith was facing foreclosure of her home because she was allegedly behind in her payments. The clinic student handling her case quickly discovered that Ms. Smith was current in her payments. The problem was the way in which the mortgage company treated her escrow payments. A simple misunderstanding like this should have been quickly resolved with a phone call or letter. Case closed, right? Not exactly. The student noted in the case file, “I guess Ms. Smith’s mortgage is just another toxic asset held by some unknown entity.”

The student filed a complaint with the State Banking Commission and prepared to litigate Smith’s case in the mortgage company’s pursuit of foreclosure. While the case was pending, two mortgage companies that held Ms. Smith’s mortgage went out of business. To make matters worse, all of the opposing lawyers with whom the clinic had been negotiating were fired or laid off. With no one to negotiate with, it felt like the Clinic was shooting at a moving target.

In the end, the student’s perseverance and hard work paid off. A new mortgage company, represented by a “reasonable” lawyer, was assigned the loan. A favorable settlement was quickly negotiated, and Ms. Smith’s loan was refinanced at a rate that cut her monthly payments by nearly $280.

Today, she is current on her house payments and is thankful for the assistance offered by the Civil Litigation Clinic.

When her case was closed, with her newfound savings, Ms. Smith offered to pay the Clinic for its work on her behalf. She was informed that the Clinic cannot accept payment from clients. Not to be dissuaded, Ms. Smith prepared a batch of her world famous banana pudding and delivered it to the students and faculty in the Clinic one spring afternoon. It was, without a doubt, the best banana pudding anyone had ever tasted!

Here at NCCU School of Law, legal education goes far beyond teaching legal theory. NCCU operates a number of excellent clinical legal education programs, but the Law School’s first clinical program was the Civil Litigation Clinic, initiated by Professor Thomas Ringer nearly 25 years ago.

The Civil Litigation Clinic, currently led by Professor Greg Malhoit, is designed for two equally important purposes: first, to allow third-year law students to learn, through experiential learning, how to practice law and represent real clients; and second, to help fulfill the promise of “equal justice under law” by providing valuable legal services to low-income persons living in the Durham area. Students represent clients across a broad range of civil areas including landlord-tenant, unemployment, consumer, domestic, government benefits, and advance directives. The students provide legal advice, prepare documents, negotiate, initiate or defend litigation, and go to trial when necessary. The supervising attorney requires that students keep a weekly journal with candid reflections of what they are learning and experimenting about the practice of law. Students also participate in weekly case review meetings to collaborate on key case decisions.

For the past 25 years, hundreds of graduates of NCCU School of Law have taken their first practical steps towards the practice of law in the Civil Litigation Clinic. With this solid foundation, most have gone on to become highly successful practicing lawyers, distinguishing themselves as leaders in their respective fields. The Clinic’s mission is to provide high quality legal and holistic representation to clients in the hopes of bringing about a cessation of violence and/or stalking in the clients’ lives and restoring dignity to the clients. Below is an example of the work we do.

Eileen Long (not her real name) sought the legal services of the Domestic Violence Clinic. Mrs. Long had filed her own Complaint for a Domestic Violence Protective Order in District Court, in which she alleged continuous verbal abuse and threats from her husband over the course of their twenty-two year marriage. She recalled one occasion when he placed a gun on the family dining table while the family were about to “show” them who was in control of their household. She remembered the sinking feeling she had whenever her husband came home from work, knowing the climate of the evening and the safety of her family relied solely on his mood. Mrs. Long’s husband eventually left the family home on his own accord but would routinely return, unannounced and at his leisure, to see what Ms. Long and the children were doing. He did not provide any financial support to the family and showed relatively no interest in the children, other than to pay information from the children regarding Mrs. Long’s activities during his absence. Mrs. Long made the decision to change the locks on the marital home to prevent her husband’s random and uninvited visits. The husband soon discovered that he could no longer enter the home whenever he wanted, and he became irate. He called Mrs. Long and told her that if she did not provide him with a key immediately, she would live to regret it. While on the phone, she heard the click of a gun and her husband’s car being started. He told her that he was on his way. Frightened, Mrs. Long called law enforcement. Fortunately for Mrs. Long, law enforcement intervened before any harm could be done to her or the children, but not before her husband unknowingly made threats to a responding officer, believing him to be a paramour of Mrs. Long. Her husband was arrested. This was the first time he was jailed for his abuse of his wife.

Mrs. Long came to our office uncertain of her legal options. She was fearful, and emotionally and physically exhausted, but she was determined. She was determined to move forward with her case and determined to break the cycle of abuse for her children. The Domestic Violence Clinic helped her obtain a one-year protective order and recommended that she participate in a domestic violence support group.

One year later, Ms. Long came back to the Clinic a new person. She was confident, strong and had a smile so bright she was almost unrecognizable. She and her children are building a new life, and her children are especially proud that she is moving them forward in a new direction. She thanked the clinical staff for their assistance and shared with the staff that she was not a domestic violence advocate so that she could help local victims of domestic violence become survivors.

The thing that is so unique about the Domestic Violence Clinic and the work we do is, that the clinical students characterize come in with an expectation that they will gain legal experience and knowledge that will enhance their professional skills. But ultimately, these students see that they have the ability to transform lives beyond the courtroom, and they readily see the value of their work and the immediate impact it has on the client’s life. While domestic violence may not be a lucrative area of law, it is an incredibly rewarding one. Nearly every student who has taken the Domestic Violence Clinic has made a

A mother of two needs immediate court representation to obtain a restraining order that will protect her and her children from a physically abusive husband, but she is afraid of what the consequences may be if the judge does not grant her an order. A young woman seeks legal advice about what her rights are in dealing with a roommate who has verbally threatened her and even mistreated her beloved pet. However, she is concerned that she cannot afford to live without her roommate’s financial contribution. A father assesses whether he should get a protective order against his son’s mother, who is constantly harassing him through text messages, e-mails and phone calls in an effort to rekindle their relationship, or do something in order to keep his relationship with his son intact. There are typical cases in which the Domestic Violence Clinic is involved. It is the Clinic’s mission to provide high quality legal and holistic representation to clients in the hopes of bringing about a cessation of violence

>>Continued on page 50

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE CLINIC

TRANSFORMING LIVES BEYOND THE COURTROOM

A brother of two needs immediate court representation to obtain a restraining order that will protect her and her children from a physically abusive husband, but she is afraid of what the consequences may be if the judge does not grant her an order. A young woman seeks legal advice about what her rights are in dealing with a roommate who has verbally threatened her and even mistreated her beloved pet. However, she is concerned that she cannot afford to live without her roommate’s financial contribution. A father assesses whether he should get a protective order against his son’s mother, who is constantly harassing him through text messages, e-mails and phone calls in an effort to rekindle their relationship, or do something in order to keep his relationship with his son intact. There are typical cases in which the Domestic Violence Clinic is involved. It is the Clinic’s mission to provide high quality legal and holistic representation to clients in the hopes of bringing about a cessation of violence

>>Continued on page 50

SPRING 11

OF COUNSEL - THE LEGAL CLINICS

OF COUNSEL - THE LEGAL CLINICS

10

11
Criminal Defense Clinic

MOVING FROM FEAR TO CONFIDENCE

In the spring of 2010, Criminal Defense Clinic client Julia Baker (not her real name) was charged with misdemeanor larceny. At 27 years old, Ms. Baker did not have any prior experience with the criminal court system. As a single mother, she was scared she might have to go to jail and be separated from her young child. At a college student, she was afraid that a criminal charge might prevent her from ever finding a good job. On top of everything else, she assigned “attorney” was only a student! Fear was a clear emotion in Ms. Baker’s eyes when she stepped into the Clinic office for her initial interview with George Marsh ’10. Yet, Mr. Marsh demonstrated such knowledge and professionalism during the interview that Ms. Baker appeared visibly relieved when she left a while later. When Mr. Marsh’s efforts resulted in Ms. Baker’s case being dismissed in court, Mr. Marsh and the Clinic proved that they were worthy of the trust and confidence Ms. Baker showed at the end of that first interview.

While working in the Criminal Defense Clinic last year, Andrew J. Neal ’10 developed confidence in his ability to handle any events that might arise in the course of client representation. Mr. Neal was assigned to represent a client, David Smith (not his real name), who was charged with a relatively minor offense: Drinking Beer While Driving. While preparing to meet Mr. Smith for the first time, Mr. Neal learned that Mr. Smith also faced a pending felony drug charge. Mr. Neal entered his office with wide eyes and obvious anxiety as he reported the news about Mr. Smith’s felony charge. After a lengthy discussion with me, Mr. Neal conducted legal research and prepared to take on both of Mr. Smith’s cases. Using his knowledge of the law, his professional skills, and my signature, Mr. Neal successfully negotiated a plea agreement in which the felony charge was dismissed. Mr. Smith was satisfied with this result and with Mr. Neal’s efforts on his behalf. Having effectively handled a felony case, Mr. Neal demonstrated that the training and experience provided by the Criminal Defense Clinic can prepare a student to handle the unexpected challenges that often arise in a client’s case.

Shortly before graduating from law school, Mr. Neal summarized his experience in the Criminal Defense Clinic as follows:

> “From what I have seen in my internships, lack of confidence in the courtroom is the biggest setback for young attorneys— not only in public speaking, but confidence in knowing the law. My experience in the Clinic has not made me by any means perfect, but it has given me a huge advantage when I get out of school. I am very grateful for my experience and feel extremely confident graduating and beginning to practice.”

Dionne Gonder-Stanley

Criminal Defense Clinic Supervising Attorney

B.A., Duke University

J.D., New York University School of Law

Family Law Clinic

MAKING A POSITIVE DIFFERENCE WITH A FAMILY IN CRISIS

There is high demand for pro bono legal representation in child custody cases. Unfortunately, the Family Law Clinic cannot meet this demand, but we do our best. Unlike other clinics, students make a commitment to this Clinic for the full academic year. This commitment allows the Clinic to serve more clients and increases the likelihood that students will represent clients until their matter is resolved. Here is a reflection of one of our dedicated students, Clarissa Halle, Class of 2011.

“My experience as a student enrolled in the Family Law Clinic course at the North Carolina Central University (NCCU) School of Law has been absolutely invaluable. Initially, I was afraid that I would be making copies and doing research or writing legal memos, leaving only limited contact with clients. Instead, I have enjoyed the supervision of a true mentor in Professor Nakia Davis ’01, who has allowed me the opportunity to gain practical experience through hands-on interaction with real clients in real courtrooms.

I am sure that I will never forget my first REAL case. Professor Davis assigned me co-counsel, Chaun McElhiney ’11, and me to a mom who desperately wanted to keep her family together. She and her husband had separated, and her husband had filed a Complaint for Custody of their eldest son. Through a series of interviews with the client and, what I would like to call, “think tanks” with Professor Davis and Chaun, it became clear that litigation was going to be exceptionally difficult for our very emotional client. Rather than rushing to file an Answer and Counterclaims, we decided to meet with opposing counsel to determine whether we could somehow find an acceptable alternative resolution for her.

“Prior to our meeting, Professor Davis prepped me and Chaun accordingly—she warned us not to give away too much, to listen intently, to take notes when necessary, and to ask as many relevant questions as we thought would get answered. I think Chaun and I both thought that Professor Davis would lead the meeting on our behalf, but she gave us the reins, allowing me to take the lead, only interjecting when necessary. I rattled off a litany of questions regarding the father's parental fitness, the necessary educational and disciplinary considerations for the rebellious teen, and the emotional impact that a custody battle as such only one of the children would have on the other's insurance. Professor Davis had paired us together partially for that reason. I did not know a lot about childrearing or the local school schedules, but Chaun’s familiarity allowed us to shine as a team during our meeting with opposing counsel.

The information we gathered during the meeting revealed that the majority of the disagreements between our clients and her husband revolved around the discipline of their teenage son. At the meeting’s close, we resolved to attempt to get the parents to agree to some form of family counseling, whether they decided to stay married or not. From all accounts, both parents lived for their children. It seemed likely that they would agree to the counseling, if not nothing else, the emotional well-being of the kids.

"Probably the biggest obstacle with our family counseling idea was that this family was not an American family. Accordingly, we needed to make sure that the proposed counselors did not impose our cultural biases on them. Professor Davis told me to do some research and instructed me to ask the NCCU Law School’s on-staff psychologist, Dr. Donna Kornegay, about insurance issues and costs.

“We found a psychologist who not only agreed to pretty much anything that the parents and who accepted our client’s insurance. Professor Davis had me draft a Consent Order as a temporary resolution to the pending custody issue, because we needed to see whether the parents could resolve their issues through counseling before we moved forward with litigation. Professor Davis reviewed the Consent Order before she allowed me to submit it to the court.

>”Continued on page 50"
In response to the epidemic of juveniles who are falling between the cracks in the juvenile justice system, the Juvenile Law Clinic was developed. Under the supervision of Clinical Professor Nebhyn Moore, students receive 60 hours of classroom instruction and training, followed by 60 hours of fieldwork in juvenile court representing students facing long-term suspension from school in Durham and Wake counties. Attorney Mark Trustin is a long-term adjunct professor for the long-term suspension cases. Many policy changes have been implemented by the local school boards as a result of his advocacy.

Jocelyn Calvin 2L recounts her experience in the Juvenile Law Clinic:

"During the Fall 2010 Juvenile Law Clinic, I received a set of facts that I was sure would result in an unfavorable outcome for my client. He was a senior in a Durham County high school and was suspended for the remainder of the school year on the first day of classes. The suspension was the result of a threatening text message he sent to his ex-girlfriend while he was at home. My client and his ex-girlfriend are next-door neighbors, and he sent the message after a heated argument. Before the case was referred to the Clinic, my client admitted to school personnel that he sent the text message. During the initial client interview, I discovered that my client had a long history of violent outbursts in school and mental health issues. Despite the facts that were given to me, I was determined to be the best advocate for my client and to help him return to school. The first thing I did was develop a legal strategy. Based on his mental health issues, I decided to explore whether my client qualified as an "exceptional student." In order to prove that my client qualified as an "exceptional student," I had to impute knowledge of his condition onto the school district by showing that the district and/or its agents knew, or should have known, that my client suffered from serious emotional distress and needed special services to be a productive student. If I could impute knowledge onto the school district, my client would go through another disciplinary process, and he would not be suspended long-term for his actions.

In an effort to prove my theory, I contacted my client’s psychiatrist, whom he had seen consistently over three years. The psychiatrist expressed his willingness to help through writing a letter, but was reluctant when I asked him to come to the administrative hearing on my client’s behalf. After numerous phone calls, persuasion, and begging, the psychiatrist agreed to come to the hearing and discuss his treatment of and recommendations for my client. On the day of the hearing, counsel for the school district saw me walking in with my client and his psychiatrist, and offered me a settlement agreement. The agreement was that the suspension would be converted to a short-term suspension on my client’s school record and my client would go to alternative school for one marking period. In addition, at the conclusion of the school year, the short-term suspension would be expunged from my client’s academic record and would be documented as an administrative transfer. My client was ecstatic when I presented the offer to him and graciously accepted it. With the long-term suspension behind him, my client enrolled in a technical college program where he could obtain his high school diploma while simultaneously earning college credits.

My experience in the Juvenile Law Clinic taught me that advocacy begins before you enter the courtroom and that preparation beforehand will yield the best results for both you and your client.

Nebhyn Moore ’00
1st Year Juvenile Law Clinic Clinical Supervising Attorney
B.A., Political Science, Spelman College
J.D., North Carolina Central University School of Law
J.D., North Carolina Central University
B.A., Political Science, Spelman College
J.D., North Carolina Central University School of Law

O n September 27, 2009, the Funk Music Preservation Society (FMPS) had its premiere in Durham, North Carolina. The guests at this event were regaled with an afternoon of the “funky” sounds of funk music and treated to video snippets of the Godfather of Soul as the originator of funk music, James Brown. At this same time last year, FMPS was a dream that was committed to paper in the form of bylaws, a business plan and articles of incorporation. However, the founder of FMPS, Mr. Kent Freeman, had no idea how to obtain the nonprofit status he desired to achieve his dream. Both the state and federal government were sending him in circles.

As a class, nine students in the Small Business and Community Development Clinic (SBDC) reviewed FMPS’s documents, including the application to the IRS for tax-exempt status. Mr. Freeman needed to file the articles of incorporation; then, he could apply for tax-exempt status from the IRS. The students explained the need for a registered agent and made suggestions on where Mr. Freeman could obtain one.

The FMPS has one ultimate goal – to provide a permanent place to house funk music by building a Funk Music Hall of Fame. Mr. Freeman recounts his experience with the SBDC:

"Professor Branch was very patient and attentive to my presentation about the nonprofit organization I was trying to build. After our initial consultation, [she] contacted me and informed me that her class of students would help me achieve my business goals as much as possible. . . . The class . . . helped design and create a new business plan and revamped the bylaws of the corporation, enhancing and outlining business operation management, and detailed the benefits and services the company will provide to a targeted market. . . . The impact Professor Felicia Branch and her students have had on my company will become historic, and a reminder . . . that organizations such as the [Small Business and Community Development Law] Clinic can have an impact within the community. . . . I want to thank Professor Branch and [the nine] students for their help, energy, and time. I would not have been able to achieve my goals without their help."

Though the students are not required to assist business owners with their business plans, students who are enrolled in the joint JD/MBA program are always eager to apply both disciplines to assist an actual client. Our partnership with the Small Business Technology Development Center (SBTDC) in the School of Business allows the SBDC to focus solely on legal matters while the SBTDC assists clients with their business issues, such as marketing, business plans, etc.

Felicia L. Branch
Email Business Clinical Supervising Attorney
B.S. Accounting, Arkansas State University
J.D., University of Arkansas School of Law
L.L.M., Taxation, University of Florida
College of Law

felicia L. Branch

S P R I N G 1 1
INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY CLINIC
PROTECTING CREATIONS OF THE MIND

“When I heard that the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office would be hosting a Trademark Clinic at NCCU School of Law, I knew that it was an opportunity that I had to take advantage of. I knew that the Patent and Trademark Office did not grant this privilege to many law schools. As a student with great interest in intellectual property, I realized that this clinic would provide me with invaluable experience that would distinguish me from my peers.”

Obiezie Mmeje, Class of 2012

In 2011, North Carolina Central University School of Law was selected by the United States Patent and Trademark Office to be one of the 16 law schools in the nation to participate in a unique clinical opportunity allowing students to assist clients seeking trademark protection of their goods and services. In this pilot program, law students can act on behalf of clients in filing applications for federal trademark registration. Without question, this is a win-win situation. The vision of the nonprofit Center for Child and Family Health (CCFH) is that every child has the right to be loved, nurtured, and safe. As an off-campus extension of the NCCU Clinical Program, the Legal Program at CCFH connects the expertise of NCCU School of Law with a wide array of mental health, medical and abuse prevention faculty and staff from Duke University, UNC Chapel Hill, and the nonprofit Child and Parent Support Services (CAPSS). In a multidisciplinary approach, which provides in-house legal support in a licensed clinical setting, is particularly effective and unique in the nation. As expressed by CCFH Executive Director, Dr. Robert Murphy:...
While direct services were the initial focus at CCFH, in part, because Medicaid reimbursements for direct mental health services have been severely cut in recent years. Nevertheless, the broad multidisciplinary expertise at CCFH lends itself well to disseminating best practices throughout the state and the nation. Indeed, last year CCFH provided professional training to over 5,000 participants nationwide. The Legal Program in particular has focused on professional training to both the legal and non-legal professions. For example, last year the Legal Director, Jennifer Brobst presented “Demystifying Psychological Assessments” to juvenile court judges, attorneys, and staff at the N.C. Administrative Office of the Courts “Court Improvement Program” conference. A joint presentation by the CCFH Legal Director and Child Psychologist, Dr. Tripp Ake, proved that two professions are better than one in a plenary session on “PTSD & Mental Health Expert Testimony” at the Fall 2009 Conference of North Carolina Association of Defense Attorneys in Greensboro. A collaboration of four CCFH mental health faculty and the Legal Director produced the first-of-its-kind online continuing education course series on “Children and Domicile Violence,” which continues to reach hundreds of online students every year. See http://www.alcconnector.com.

The faculty and staff at CCFH are truly an impressive lot. In this short space, we can only mention a few of the types of programs that CCFH has developed in its short 15 years on behalf of children and families, such as:

• The East Durham Children’s Initiative (EDCI) coordinating community services to families in a 120-block contiguous area east of downtown Durham in one of the most impoverished sections of the city;
• The Period of Purple Crying, which has brought shaken-baby syndrome prevention materials to every mother giving birth in every hospital in the state;
• The research programs CCFH works with in helping bring evidence-based mental health therapy to HIV/AIDS orphans in Malawi and other parts of Africa;
• Policy work with the Legal Director’s involvement in the N.C. Commission on Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities, and Substance Abuse, and the N.C. Commission on Domestic Violence;
• Not to mention all of its teen clinical support groups, Early Head Start, and other Durham school programs.

As a final thought, one would ordinarily begin a program description with its history, but here we will end with a historical note. One of the three founders of CCFH is NCCU School of Law Professor Cheryl Amana, and its first Legal Director was Professor Pamela Glen, now Assistant Dean of the Law School’s Clinical Legal Education Program. Both continue to provide invaluable support through involvement on the CCFH Board of Directors, and maintain dynamic links between CCFH and the clinical programs at NCCU School of Law. As stated by Dean Glen:

“I consider the Center to be a critical component of our clinical program. The relationship serves as a constant reminder to our students of the impact legal difficulties have on children and families. This reminder advances the mission of the clinical program to produce attorneys who are sensitive to all of the needs of vulnerable, underserved communities, not just their legal needs.”

For many years, through its partnership with our university neighbors at CCFH, NCCU School of Law has generously provided funding and legal support to its most vulnerable community members – its children. The vision of its founders that every child be loved, nurtured, and safe comes to life every day through the many multidisciplinary programs at CCFH, and through the ongoing work of NCCU law students and alumni who have worked with the CCFH Legal Program and who continue to carry that vision forward.
To commemorate National Constitution Day, the NCCU School of Law unveiled a Mural of The Constitution of the United States of America created by the famed muralist, Michael Brown. The unveiling ceremony took place on Friday, September 17, 2010, at 4:00 p.m. on the second floor of the Turner Law Building. The guest speaker was Randall Kennedy, the Michael R. Klein Professor of Law at Harvard Law School. In his lecture, Professor Kennedy examined aspects of the U.S. Constitution as it relates to the historic and present day understanding of U.S. citizenship.

Dedication remarks were given by Art Pope, President of the John William Pope Foundation, immediately following the unveiling of the mural. Mr. Pope’s remarks centered on the ways in which “the force of ideas declared and adopted in 1776” have guided the “interpretation and application to the law of these documents.” In referring specifically to the 13th, 14th, 15th, and 19th Amendments, Mr. Pope recognized the evolutionary growth of our founding documents as our country strives for “not a perfect, but a ‘more perfect union’ under Constitutional government.”

Dean Pierce was very pleased with the outcome of the project. He stated, “Michael Brown has done an outstanding job in creating this mural of the United States Constitution. The mural is a fitting addition to our law school building. Our law school is thankful to Art Pope and The Pope Foundation for their generous support toward this work of art.”

MEMBERS OF THE UNITED STATES ARMED FORCES JUDGE ADVOCATES CORPS AND LEADING NATIONAL EXPERTS IN MILITARY JUSTICE VISITED NCCU SCHOOL OF LAW TO DISCUSS ISSUES IN LAW AND NATIONAL SECURITY, INCLUDING THE COMPLEXITIES THAT WOULD BE INVOLVED IN CLOSING THE GUANTANAMO BAY DETENTION CAMP. SEATED FROM LEFT ARE NAVY CAPT. DAVID WAGNER, AIR FORCE MAJ. RODNEY BULLARD, AIR FORCE COL. AND CHIEF JUDGE JAMES WISE, AND DUKE LAW PROFESSOR SCOTT SILLIMAN, NOVEMBER 14, 2008 ISSUES IN LAW AND NATIONAL SECURITY FORUM
LEADERS IN LAW

Mark Chandler
Senior Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary, Cisco Systems Inc., September 30, 2010.

Congressman Bob B. Etheridge
February 5, 2010. Federal Tax Law Update

E. Christopher Johnson, Jr.
Vice President and General Counsel, General Motors North America, September 22, 2008. Diversity as an Imperative in the Legal Profession

Congressman G. K. Butterfield ’74
February 5, 2010. Federal Tax Law Update

Hon. John G. Roberts, Jr.

Hon. Walter Dalton
North Carolina Lt. Governor, October 28, 2009. A Public Interest Law Luncheon and Learn Lecture

Mark Chandler
Senior Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary, Cisco Systems Inc., September 30, 2010. The Future of the Legal Profession: What New Graduates Should Expect and What Law Schools Should Be Teaching

Larry D. Thompson
Vice President, General Counsel Affairs, General Counsel & Secretary, PepsiCo Inc., November 3, 2010. The Responsible Corporation and Professional Courage

Michele Coleman Mayes
Senior Vice President and General Counsel, Allstate Insurance Company, January 20, 2011. You Really Can Be in Control – Charting Your Journey

Roy Cooper

Hon. Kenneth W. Starr
Dean Pepperdine School of Law, former U.S. Solicitor General, former Judge D.C. Court of Appeals, now President of Baylor University, October 22, 2008. The Modern American Lawyer and the Caring Community

Hon. Dennis W. Archer
Former Associate Justice, Michigan State Supreme Court, past President of the American Bar Association, former Mayor, City of Detroit, June 25, 2008. A Conversation with Dennis Archer

Thomas E. Perez
Assistant Attorney General, United States Department of Justice, Civil Rights Division, February 1, 2010. The Merits of Public Service in the Federal Government

Hon. Marvin S. Cheatham
Vice President and General Counsel, Administration and External Relations, Wal-Mart Corporation, September 16, 2008. Making Diversity Sustainable in the Legal Profession

Fred A. Whitfield ’88
President & CEO of Bobcats Sports and Entertainment, September 9, 2009. A Sports and Entertainment Law Lunch and Learn Lecture
The Biotechnology and Pharmaceutical Law Institute held its first annual Health Law Moot Court Competition on September 24, 2010. The competition offers students the opportunity to engage in leading health care topics and laws that govern these issues. The first place winner of the inaugural competition was 2L Gwendolyn Babson who is also a Registered Nurse. Second place winner was 2L Jaamal Jennings, with 2L Henrietta Asiedu placing third.

Many NCCU law students come to law school with a variety of interests, while others are still pinpointing their interest. With the help of our adjunct faculty, we are able to develop those interests. With classes like In-House Counsel, Business Transaction for Lawyers, Law Office Practice, Intellectual Property seminars, National Security Law, Workers Compensation, and Immigration Law, we are able to open new opportunities for, and provide invaluable insight to, our students. Our students are introduced to experienced and successful lawyers and judges who can provide a practical perspective and serve as mentors and role models. Most students come to law school knowing about defense attorneys, prosecutors or personal injury attorneys. Our adjuncts introduce students to areas of law that many were unaware of prior to coming to law school.

Even before the legal academy embraced the importance of providing legal writing opportunities beyond the first year, NCCU recognized that legal writing was one of the pillars that had to be firmly supported for the Law School to offer a diverse, challenging academic environment that would adequately prepare our graduates for practice. We ensure the success of our students by affording one-on-one contact between professor and student in first-year and upper-level writing courses. The Legal Writing adjunct professors, under the leadership of Professor Brenda Gibson, prepare our graduates for practice.
ADJUNCT PROFILES

Leonard Jernigan ‘76

Leonard Jernigan ’76 is one of several practitioners/scholars among the ranks of NCCU School of Law adjunct faculty. He has been in the Workers Compensation field for over thirty years and is Board Certified by the N.C. State Bar. A few years after graduating from the Law School, Jernigan was asked to help file compensation claims for textile workers who had contracted an occupational lung disease,byssinosis. Thereafter, he handled asbestos claims and other claims involving work-related injuries.

He founded The Jernigan Law Firm in 1988 in Raleigh, where he continues to practice. In 1995, Jernigan became one of the founding members of the Workers’ Injury Law and Advocacy Group (WILG), a national organization of attorneys who represent injured workers, and served as WILG’s President in 2001. Jernigan is currently on the Wake County Bar Association’s Board of Directors and the Board of Visitors for the Law School.

Jernigan enjoys a favorable reputation at the Law School and always receives high marks from the students on his evaluations. One recent student reported that Professor Jernigan’s class was the best class he had taken at the Law School.

New Adjunct Faculty

Joyce Jerambo ’96

Joyce Jerambo, ’96, who retired from a career as a Professor in the Dental School at UNC and as a Trademark Law practitioner at Moore and Van Allen, is serving as the Supervising Attorney for the NCCU United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO) Trademark Clinic. The Clinic is one of less than 20 approved by the USPTO to allow students to prosecute trademark applications on behalf of live clients before the office.

NEW AND VISITING FACULTY

Charles Hamilton Houston Lecture Series

The Charles Hamilton Houston Endowed Chair was established for the NCCU Law School in honor of the noted legal scholar, litigator and civil rights advocate. The funding for the Chair has been generously donated by Mr. Frank Anderson and his wife, Ms. Susan Powell, and matched by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors’ Distinguished Professor Trust Fund.

September 16, 2010

ANN JOYNER

President, Cedar Grove Institu- tion for Sustainable Communities, Inc. Structural Racism

October 7, 2010

JUDGE CHARLES RECTION

2010 Charles Hamilton Houston Chair The Equalizers: Lawyers Influencing Society

November 4, 2010

PROFESSOR JAMES JOHNSON

UNC Kenan-Flagler Business School

Enterprise Demographics: Implications for Workforce Planning and Development

November 18, 2010

EVELYN HIGGINBOTHAM

John Hope Franklin Visiting Professor of American Legal History at Duke University

For Slavery to Freedom

March 17, 2011

PROFESSOR RUTH GORDON

Villanova University School of Law

The Centrality of International Law in a Globalized World: The Case of Climate Change

OF COUNSEL / FACULTY NEWS

R. J. Reynolds Lecture Series

The R. J. Reynolds Endowed Chair was established for the NCCU School of Business and the School of Law in 1996, through the generous donation of the R. J. Reynolds Corporation with matching funds provided by the North Carolina Board of Governors’ Distinguished Professor Trust Fund.

August 18, 2010

PROFESSOR CHARLES SALLOH

University of Pittsburgh School of Law

Africa and the International Criminal Court: Collision

October 20, 2010

PROFESSOR EMERITA JUDY SCALES-TRENT

SUNY Buffalo School of Law

African Americans and the R.J. Reynolds Lecture Series

February 23, 2011

PROFESSOR HENRY RICHARDSON

Temple University School of Law African Americans and International Business in Africa

Continued on next page
Cheryl Amana-Burris presented at the Western Regional BLSA Conference in February of 2010 on alternative careers in the law and life in the academy. In March, she spoke on “Know Your Rights” at the Links Annual Conference for Middle School Students. Also in March, Professor Amana-Burris was presented with the first annual Professor Cheryl Amana-Burris Award for Distinguished Service by the Women’s Law Caucus at their annual branch for faculty and staff. She attended the annual meeting of Black Prosecurors held in San Francisco in July, as well as the annual awards dinner for the Charles Houston Bar Associa- tion in December. Professor Amana-Burris was recognized this past summer for her support of the Legal Writing Program. In September, she presented at the North Carolina Association of Women Attorneys Annual Conference that was held at the Grandover Resort in Greensboro, NC, as part of a panel on diversity in the profession. She prepared the BARBRI materials on Family Law and gave the winter lecture in January 2011. She has been active with the Minorities in the Profession Committee of the North Carolina Bar Association as well as its subcommittee on Law School Admissions. She continues to serve as a member of the Institutional Review Board (IRB) for the University and a number of standing and ad hoc committees for the Law School. James Beckwith

James Beckwith presented in June at the 2010 CALI (Computer Assisted Legal Instruc- tion) Annual Meeting at the Runge Law School in Camden, NJ. He spoke on engaged teaching in a small classroom and wrote a paper for the proceedings, “Rebooting Legal Education: Infrastructure and Engaged Teaching in a Small Classroom.” Professor Bedsworth continues (since 2001) to serve as Editor of Notes Bearing Interest for the Business Law Section of the North Caro- lina Bar Association. An issue of Notes Bearing Interest is being planned for 2011, which will discuss the state of transactional legal education and transactional legal clinics at the seven North Carolina law schools.

Jennifer Brobst presented at the following Continuing Legal Education seminars “Gender Disparity in Public Service,” panel presenta- tion for the N.C. Bar Association Conference; “Raising to the Challenge – Women in Public Office,” Raleigh, October 2010; “Diversity of Voice, Leadership and Perspective among Women Legal Professionals,” Pinnary Panel Session (with Professor Cheryl Amana-Burris and Finnete Couch, Esq.), NCBA Annual Conference, Greensboro, September 2010; and “Dennysi- fying Psychological Assessments,” N.C. Admin- istrative Office of the Courts Court Improvement Program conference for juvenile court judges and staff, April 2010. Professor Brobst has been accepted to present a workshop on “Law and the Imagination in Teaching Scientific Evidence” in the upcoming 2011 Applied Legal Storytelling Conference at Sturm College of Law, Universi- ty of Denver this summer. She continues to provide annual local continuing education semi- nars on Expert Witness Testimony and Ethics for Medical and Mental Health practitioners at the Center for Child and Family Health to Center staff and interns and residents from Duke Univer- sity, UNC-Chapel Hill, and NCCU. Brobst is currently a member of the N.C. Commission on Mental Health, Developmental Disability, and Substance Abuse, and the N.C. Commission on Domestic Violence. She is also a member of the Justice System Consortium of the National Child Traumatic Stress Network, for which she is assisting in the development of judicial training materials on the admisibility of evidence of child traumatic stress. Brobst provided volun- teer judging or coaching assistance in several events this academic year, including the Fourth Annual Carolina Classic Mock Trial Tournament at Elon University, October 2010; the Tobacco Road Regional Mock Trial Tournament at UNC Chapel Hill, February 2011; the NBLSA Fred- erick Douglass Southern Regional Mock Court Competition, December 2010; and the NCCU Dispute Resolution Institute 40-hour Superior Court Mediation/ADR Clinic, January 2011.

Kimberly Coggdell presented a work in progress at the National People of Color Confer- ence at Seton Hall University School of Law on September 12, 2010. She also served as a panelist on Health Care Reform at the same confer- ence. Professor Coggdell presented at the Texas Wesleyan University School of Law Innocence and the Road to Exoneration Symposium on her most recent article - “Misuse of DNA Evidence is not a ‘Harmless Error’ – Prosecutorial Miscon- duct, Wrongful Conviction and DNA Evidence.” This article is scheduled to be published by the Texas Wesleyan Law Review. Finally, Professor Coggdell presented at the Southeastern Law Schools Conference on October 22, 2010 at the Charleston School of Law on the topic “The Presumption of Maturity: Brady’s DNA.”

Jeffrey Edwards attended the AALS Clin- ical Conference on Legal Education in Baltimore, MD in May 2010. He is serving as the Chair of the Teens and Attorneys Partners in Success (TAPS) subcommittee of the NCBA Law-Related Education Committee. This committee will partner with at-risk middle school students with local lawyers/mentors and will empower them with skills to help them succeed in high school. This January, Professor Edwards served as a panelist at the Southern Region Black Law Students Associa- tion Law Journal Symposium. The theme for the symposium was “Southern Discomfort: A Criti- cal Analysis of the Southern Black Community’s Legal Strides and Struggles in the 21st Century.”

Dionne Gender-Stanley was appointed to serve on the Board of Directors for North Carolina Prisoner Legal Services, Inc., the N.C. Bar Association Law School Liaison Committee, and the N.C. Bar Association Minorities in the Profession Committees. In 2010, she attended the following conferences: AALS Clinical Legal Education Conference, May 2010; the NCJLF Masters in Criminal Advocacy Program, June 2010; and the N.C. Bar Association CLE entitled “When Issues Collide: The Seriousness of Immi- gration Consequences of Criminal Penalties Finally Recognized,” June 2010. She also taught at the NITA Southeast Region Trial Skills program in May 2010 and presented at a panel at the Chris- tian Legal Society Prayer Breakfast in November 2010. Professor Gender-Stanley continues to volunteer every year with the Exponent Seminar Project of the Durham County Bar Association and the UNC-Chapel Hill Collegiate Mock Trial Regional Tournament.

David A. Green has returned to the class- room full time where he enjoys teaching Civil Procedure, Employment Discrimination and Disability Law. In the Fall of 2010, he began serving on an ad hoc committee to establish the Durham NAACP Legal Redress Fund. The purpose of the Fund will be to help defray the costs of selected cases or legal battles involving issues related to employment discrimination, police misconduct, school inequality, access to fair housing, and others. Furthermore, during the Fall of 2010, he continued to serve on the Salvation Army Boys and Girls Advisory Board. In October 2010, Professor Green began to participate in the Hillsdale High School Trau- ma Court Program. The Trauma Program is designed... as an intervention effort to assure that Hillool High School students are maintaining atten- dance consistent with North Carolina law. On November 21, 2010, he served as a judge in the finals of the Duke University Mock Trial Tobacco Road Invitational.

Irving Joyner researched and completed the 2010 Supplement to the third edition of Crim- inal Procedure in North Carolina, published by the Lesi Nexis Publishing Company. In addition, he researched and authored monthly articles for the Spectator Magazine, a Durham publica- tion on politics and law, as well as nine appellate briefs and related documents on behalf of indi- vidual defendants with the North Carolina Court of Appeals and North Carolina Supreme Court. Professor Joyner is a member of a litigation team which represents Wake Country parents, students, NAACP and other community organizations in a Title VI Administrative complaint against actions by the Wake County School Board to re-seg- regate its school system and in an open meeting challenge which is presently being considered by the North Carolina Court of Appeals. Professor Joyner served on numerous panels, including the Parliamentary Procedure Workshop conducted by the NCCU chapter of Phi Beta Lambda Frater- nity; the Gezzenboro Truth and Reconciliation Commission, which focused on the 1979 Nazi- Klans massacre of political activists in Gezzen- boros; the NCCU Law School’s Native American Recruitment Day Program; and NCCU’s Politi- cal Science Department Pre-Law Seminar. He helped organize and served as moderator for the Law School panel discussion of the movie, “Blood Done Signed My Name” with author Dr. Timothy Tyson and Dr. Benjamin Chavis, the UNC-Chapel Hill’s Tribute to Julius Chambers; the George H. White Bar Association’s Annual Scholarship Dinner; the 50th year commemoration of the founding and accomplishments of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC); and NCCU’s 2010 Constitution Law Day Teach-In. Professor Joyner was a featured speaker at the Chapel Hill-Gregory Community Law Fair and the Chapel Hill Orange County Vistor’s Bureau Board of Directors.

Adrienne Meddock ’91 successfully applied for NCCU School of Law’s inclusion in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office’s Small Business Program. Professor Meddock also serves on the strategic Planning Committee of the North Carolina Bar Association which develops plans for the organization’s direction. This spring, she is coaching the 2011 Saul Lefkowitz Trademark Moot Court team. The Lefkowitz competition is sponsored by the International Trademark Asso- ciation; the NCCU School of Law and Meddock have been participating in the high-level competi- tion since 1995.

Reginald Mombrun ’86 presented his latest article, “Shifting the Paradigm by Bringing Tax Arbitrage to the Lower Income Segmented Family: Why Should the Middle to Upper Class Family Have All The Fun?,” on May 28, 2010 at the Law & Society Convention in Chicago, Illinois. The article will be published in Spring 2011 in the Akron Tax Journal. Professor Mombrun was the lead investigator on a successful grant application for the establishment of a Low Income Taxpayer Clinic at the Law School. He is co-director of the Clinic until a permanent director is hired. He updated all of CALL’s tax lessons during the Summer of 2010 and made a presentation on how to write a tax treatise to the faculty during its annual retreat. Professor Mombrun made his annual presentation on L.M. tax programs in the Fall of 2010 and delivered his lecture on IRS rulemaking, “The Four Re: Regulations, Rulings, Reliance and Retroactivity,” to the Administra- tive Law class on February 22, 2010. Along with Professor Felicia Branch, he instituted a Tax Certificate Program at the Law School.

Mark W. Morris ’82 directs the Dispute Resolution Institute at the School of Law, including the Certificate Program in Dispute Resolution, the only such program at any of the state’s seven law schools. In addition to the regular curriculum, the DRI Summer Institute offers students, lawyers and other professionals a wide selection of courses for academic credit, certified mediation training, professional skills development workshops, and CLE programs at the campus in Durham and in connection with the Summer Study Abroad Program in Costa Rica. Professor Morris recently completed a three-year term on the North Carolina Dispute Resolution Commission, where he chaired the Standards, Discipline, and Advisory Opinion Committee. He is also a member of the Board of Directors of the Mediation Network of North Carolina. He is at work on the third edition of his treatise, North Carolina Law of Taxes.

Nevelyn Mpare ’80 was a faculty member at NITAS’s Southeast Regional Program, May 15-18, 2010 at UNC Law School. This training program teaches trial skills to practicing attorneys.

Dorothy D. Nachman’s ’96 article, “Living Wills: Is It Time to Pull the Plug?,” will appear in the Fall 2010 edition of The Elder Law Journal of the University of Illinois College of Law (Vol. 18, No. 2). She edited the “Wills” and “Trusts” components of the North Carolina BARRIER bar preparation materials. Professor Nachman continues to serve on the ABA Law Student’s Competition Subcommittee and hosted the National Client Counseling Competition at the NCCU School of Law in the Spring of 2010.

Raymond C. Pierce was appointed to the American Bar Association Council on Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar in August 2010. He also serves on the ABA Bar Admis- sions Committee. He is a member of the North Carolina Banking Commission and is a vice President and member of the Board of Governors of the North Carolina Bar Association. Dean Pierce is also on the Executive Board of the Duke University School of Law Center on Law, Ethics, and National Security.

Page Potter amended the 2010 American Association of Law Schools (AALS) Clinical Legal Education Conference in Baltimore, MD. In Summer 2010, she co-directed NCCU’s Legal Eagle Law Camp for middle and high school students.

Wendy Scott participated in several symposia and attended conferences in 2010. In February 2010, Dean Scott spoke at the Grier v. Tennessee Symposium, hosted by the Univer- sity of Tennessee Law School and the Howard Baker Center for Public Policy. The Symposium honored noted plaintiff Rita Grier with a discus- sion of the past and future of higher education in Tennessee. Dean Scott also spoke on a panel at the April 2010 Diversity in Higher Education Conference in Durham, hosted by Duke Univer- sity and the Conference Board. She presented a Charles Smith was a visiting professor at Florida A&M University (FAMU), College of Law from 2008-2010; teaching Business Organizations, Contracts II, Entertainment Law, Intellectual Property, Sales, and Sports Law. Professor Smith served as moderator for one of the sessions at the Entertainment, Arts and Sports Law Society (EASLS) National Conference, hosted by FAMU in 2009. Professor Smith also served as the coach of The FAMU Black Law Students Association team that competed in the Southern Regional Moot Court Competition in Baton Rouge, LA in January 2010. As a contributing author for the American Bar Association, Intellectual Property Law Developments 2010 Annual Review, Professor Smith prepared ten (10) articles. His submissions included discussion of two United States Supreme Court decisions; one from the Sixth and Ninth United States Circuit Courts of Appeals, respectively; one from the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit; one each from the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, and the United States District Court of Minnesota; one on the Satellite Television and Localism Act of 2010 (enacted); and one on the Innovative Design Protection and Piracy Prevention Act (S.3720) (not enacted). These articles were published in February 2011.

Kia Vernon ’00 attended the AALS Mid-year Meeting in San Francisco, CA, January 2011. She was a panelist for a "Minorities in Law" program at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in October 2010. She co-authored a book, Investing in Your Success: A Practical Guide to Achieving Your Best Results in Your First Year of Law School (with Krisher G. Caley), which was used as the course text for North Carolina Central University School of Law’s Critical Thinking class for all first-year law students. Additionally, Professor Vernon volunteered at J.Y. Joyner Elementary, Raleigh, NC in 2010 and was a speaker at the J.Y. Joyner Career Day.

Kacie Wallace ’99 conducted a three-week workshop for the Baldwin Scholars program at Duke University on “Women, Leadership and Negotiation” (Spring 2010). At NCCU School of Law, she was a panelist at the Women’s Law Caucus and of Girl Talk (Spring 2010). She presented on the topic of “Filming Justice and Documenting Social Issues in NC” at a Wilderes Leadership Initiative Conference in Litter, Switzerland, NC (Spring 2010). She also spoke on the topic of “Women and Negotiation” at the Money, Sex and Power Conference at Duke University and on “Mentors and Heroes” at the Women at Duke Conference (Fall 2010). Professor Wallace presented a “Conflict Resolution” workshop to the Seventh grade at Durham Academy (Fall 2010). She also conducted a seminar for international Masters Degree students on “Conflict Management Skills” through the Rotary Center for International Studies in Peace and Conflict Resolution (Fall 2010). Professor Wallace also successfully mediated a large multi-party, multi-issue conflict for the U.S. Olympic Committee in California (Winter 2011). She serves on the North Carolina Bar Association Dispute Resolution Section Council. Her area of research involves the impact of social media on international conflict.

In September 2010, Professor Todd Clark earned second place in the Third National People of Color Faculty Writing Competition, held at Seton Hall Law School in Newark, NJ. Professor Clark’s article titled, “My President is Black And I Be God Damn If My Agent Ain’t Too,” will be published in the upcoming edition of the Georgetown Journal of Law and Modern Critical Race Perspectives. The article provides a comprehensive explanation as to how the Rooney Rule, which requires NFL franchises to interview at least one minority head coaching candidate before making a final hiring decision, will have a palpable effect on increasing the number of Black athletes that hire Black agents. More specifically, it illustrates how the scope of the Rooney Rule will extend beyond its intended purpose in increasing the number of Black head coaches and administrators.

As a result of the Rooney Rule, Black players will observe more Blacks in positions of power. Consequently, the myth that Blacks are unsuitable for such positions will be dispelled as an increasing number of the Black athletes begin to experience the realization of Blacks being placed in these types of positions. As this occurs, Black athletes will increase their level of confidence in hiring Black agents for the purpose of representation. Professor Clark’s article also sets forth a new and novel diversity-based process for eliminating and/or reducing the significant level of agent corruption that currently burdens college football. This latter issue has recently gained an extensive amount of coverage after Nick Saban, the current head coach of the University of Alabama, while speaking at the Southeastern Conference Football Media Days, compared unscrupulous sports agents to “pimps,” after one of his star players, defensive end Marcell Dareus, came under investigation for attending an agent-sponsored party, in violation of NCAA rules and regulations, this summer in Miami, Florida. Professor Clark joined the NCCU Law Faculty in 2007 and teaches Business Associations, Contracts I and II, and Employment Discrimination.
O n Thursday, September 16, 2010, the School of Law held a Gala Retirement Dinner in honor of Professors Thomas M. Ringer, Walter H. Nunnallee and Monica K. Kalo, and Mrs. Iris W. Gilchrist at the prestigious Brier Creek Country Club in Raleigh, NC. The event celebrated the honorees’ long and distinguished careers with North Carolina Central University School of Law. The ballroom at the country club was filled to capacity with alumni, family, and friends of the honorees’ who, over dinner, listened to video tributes from selected individuals (chosen by the honorees) as they shared stories and remembrances of those being honored. Music by the NCCU Jazz Combo and Fred Mills added to the celebratory mood of the evening.

O n Wednesday, October 27, 2010, the Dean hosted the annual reception for the Law School’s recent graduates at the North Carolina Bar Center to congratulate them on their success in passing the Bar. This gathering of faculty, administrators, graduates, and students gives everyone a chance to reconnect and celebrate the graduates’ new status as practicing attorneys. The Bar Center’s main hall was buzzing with news. NCCU Law’s graduates have found employment in a spectrum of practice areas and geographic locations ranging from Durham to the U.S. Virgin Islands. The reception allowed our Legal Eagles a chance to mingle in a professional environment and celebrate overcoming that last hurdle before beginning what we all hope is a rewarding career.

The Dean reminded the assembled crowd that our school has a strong tradition of alumni service and we hope that these newly admitted eagles remember that they are one half of the equation for the success of the Law School. In order to facilitate the continued participation in the Law School Community, the school has created the “Eagles Nest,” a comprehensive, interactive intranet site with information and user-generated content such as forums and Twitter feeds. The “Eagles Nest” is located at http://web.nccu.edu/law/nest/Alumni.html. Keep in touch!
The academic year was capped by our commencement ceremony where 177 juris doctorates were awarded, and those assembled were addressed by the Honorable L. Douglas Wilder, former Governor of Virginia. Wilder’s career in public service spans 40 years and is noted for several historic milestones.
CIVIL RIGHTS DOCUMENTS DONATED TO NCCU

Jack Greenberg, currently a Professor of Law at Columbia Law School, has donated a significant amount of civil rights materials he accumulated throughout his professional career to the NCCU School of Law. The collection of 280 briefs is the most valuable part of the gift. It provides a snapshot of the work of racial equality advocates, and particularly the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, which forever transformed race relations in the United States. Included are documents from landmark cases, such as Brown v. Board of Education (1954), which Greenberg helped argue before the U.S. Supreme Court, as well as lesser cases that never reached a decision.

At Columbia College, Greenberg served as Dean and Professor of Law from 1989 to 1993. Vice Dean and Professor of Law from 1984 to 1989, and Adjunct Professor of Law from 1970 to 1984. As Assistant Counsel at the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, Greenberg assisted Thurgood Marshall in leading education and demonstration cases and succeeded Marshall as Director-Counsel. He authored a New York City ordinance prohibiting discrimination against women and minorities in private clubs.

Greenberg also founded the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund. He consulted in South Africa on the creation of the Legal Resources Centre (the leading civil rights legal organization there). He has participated in numerous overseas human rights missions and lectured in Europe and several African nations.

Greenberg is a prolific writer, authoring books on civil rights and many articles on affirmative action in higher education. More recently, he has focused his attention on the discrimination faced in Europe by the Roma, which Greenberg has called “one of the greatest humanitarian and economic crises of our time.”

It is my honor as president of the NCCU School of Law Alumni Association to, once again, bring you greetings on behalf of the Association’s Board of Directors.

This past year, serving as your president, has been filled with great activities and pleasurable associations. At the 2011 graduation ceremony, I had the opportunity to share with the new graduates and their families and guests the message of speaking well of, and giving back to, the Law School. In the fall, the Board of Directors and I had the opportunity to meet, greet, and dine with numerous Law School students. At this fall event, the Board witnessed the “unveiling” of the Eagle’s Nest intranet site and blog. This is a site designed to help existing law students and alumni to connect. The address for the site is http://web.nccu.edu/law/nest/Alumni.html.

Most significantly, over the past year, I have been impressed with the efforts of the Development Office to reach out to alumni and to make giving to the Law School a convenient, consistently-present, but not overly-intrusive, endeavor. The ongoing mission of my tenure is to help increase the percentage of our alumni who contribute financially to the Law School and to expand the level of commitment for those who have contributed in the past. Please review the 2010 Honor Roll of Donors, located at http://www.nccu.edu/formedoc/proxy.cfm?file_id=1178. If your name is not there, it should be! If you are a regular donor, and if your circumstances permit in these difficult times, consider increasing your normal level of donation by 25 percent, 50 percent, or more. If you have never contributed or have not done so lately, begin today. No amount is too small.

Finally, please do not hesitate to contact me at sheliachevis@hotmail.com with questions or recommendations you have regarding the Law School or the Alumni Board, or if you have an interest in working with the Board.

With warmest regards,
Sheila W. Chavis ’00
Alumni Association President

RALEIGH ALUMNI RECEPTION

On April 13, 2010, the Raleigh alumni held their annual reception at the stately North Carolina Governor’s Mansion in downtown Raleigh. More than 25 area alumni attended this exciting event.

LETTER FROM THE ALUMNI PRESIDENT

O n November 12, 2010, the NCCU School of Law hosted the annual D.C. Luncheon at the Capital Grille in Washington, D.C. This annual event brings together members of the judiciary from Virginia, Washington D.C., Maryland, and New York and members of the U.S. Congress to promote internship opportunities for students at NCCU School of Law.

Also in attendance at this year’s luncheon were congressional staff, representatives from the law firms of Williams & Connolly, Smith & Connolly, & Lee PLLC and Goddard, Devore, Lanch & Dunn PLLC, and representatives from Wells Fargo Securities. The D.C. Luncheon is in its seventh year and also serves to thank members of Congress, judges and agency executives for their support in providing summer internships and employment opportunities for NCCU School of Law students.
Thomas H. Hodges, Jr. ’82, has been named as the new Employment Security Commission Chief Counsel. His appointment was effective July 1, 2010. Hodges succeeds Thomas S. Whitaker who retired effective June 30.

Craig Croom ’94, a Wake County District Court Judge for more than a decade, has been appointed by North Carolina Governor Bev Perdue to be a Special Superior Court Judge.

"Judge Croom was a distinguished prosecutor and has been a valuable member of the judiciary," Perdue said in a prepared statement. "He will be a great addition to the superior court."

Croom, a graduate of UNC-Chapel Hill and NCCU School of Law, has been a Wake County District Court Judge since 1999. He also has worked as an Assistant District Attorney for Wake County, been a clerk for Judge Jack Count of the North Carolina Court of Appeals, served as a deputy sheriff for the Wake County Sheriff’s Department and been a paramedic in Orange County.

Karen Fraizer Alston ’94 Accepts Position in Saudi Arabia

Karen Fraizer Alston ’94 has been named the Director of Business Operations for the Global Collaborative Research (GCR) Division of the King Abdullah University of Science and Technology (KAUST) in Thuwal, Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. KAUST was conceived 25 years ago by His Majesty, The Custodian of the Two Holy Mosques, King Abdullah, as a means of modernizing Saudi Arabia. The University, which is located on the Red Sea, opened its doors in September 2009 as an independent and merit-based international, graduate-level research university, supported by a multi-billion dollar endowment. KAUST focuses its research in disciplines such as energy and the environment, water desalination, industrial biotechnology, engineering, nanotechnology, and mathematics and computational scientific computing. KAUST is the only co-ed university in Saudi Arabia, and it is housed in world-class facilities serving the most highly sought-after international students and the most well-known researchers and scholars from around the world.

Ms. Alston will be responsible for managing the Global Collaborative Research (GCR) Division and for overseeing its international grants compliance program. The GCR Division’s mission, as the external funding entity of the University, is to develop and fund research relationships with renowned universities and research institutions throughout the world and to design and conduct the University’s mission-related research. Current relationships include those with institutions in Europe, Asia, Africa, North America, and Australia.

Ms. Alston is a graduate of Hampton Institute (’84) with a B.A. in Chemistry and of North Carolina Central University School of Law (’94). She clerked for the Honorable Robert F. Orr at the North Carolina Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court of North Carolina. Subsequently, she practiced law in the areas of Immigration Law, Family Law and Personal Injury Law. She then served her alma mater in several capacities, including serving as the School of Law’s first Associate Dean for Finance and Administration and the University’s Title III Programs Grants Compliance Officer.

Most recently, Ms. Alston was Assistant Grants Compliance Officer in the Office of the Director, Office of Policy and Extramural Research Administration at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, MD. Ms. Alston is licensed to practice law in the State of North Carolina, the Eastern and Middle Districts of the U.S. Federal District Courts, and the U.S. Supreme Court. In addition, she holds certificates in Grants Writing & Grants Management.

Ms. Alston’s son, Jason (age 11), will join her in Saudi Arabia. Her daughter, Olivia (Hampton University ’09), will remain in the U.S. where she is completing her medical degree studies at the Brody School of Medicine at East Carolina University.

Dorothy Bernholz ’75, Director of Student Legal Services at North Carolina University at Chapel Hill, received the Order of the Long Leaf Pine for her distinguished legal service to the State of North Carolina. Representative Joe Hackney, Speaker of the N.C. House of Representatives, presented the prestigious award on behalf of Governor Bev Perdue at a meeting of Orange County’s Bar Association.

Guy Crabtree ’78, has been named President-Elect of the North Carolina Advocates for Justice.

Craig Hemmens ’84 has been appointed as the Director of Business Operations for the Global Collaborative Research (GCR) Division of the King Abdullah University of Science and Technology (KAUST) in Thuwal, Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. KAUST focuses its research in disciplines such as energy and the environment, water desalination, industrial biotechnology, engineering, nanotechnology, and mathematics and computational scientific computing.

Karen Fraizer Alston ’94 has been named the Director of Business Operations for KAUST.

Karen Fraizer Alston ’94 Accepts Position in Saudi Arabia

Karen Fraizer Alston ’94 has been named the Director of Business Operations for the Global Collaborative Research (GCR) Division of the King Abdullah University of Science and Technology (KAUST) in Thuwal, Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. KAUST focuses its research in disciplines such as energy and the environment, water desalination, industrial biotechnology, engineering, nanotechnology, and mathematics and computational scientific computing.

Karen Fraizer Alston ’94 has been named the Director of Business Operations for the Global Collaborative Research (GCR) Division of the King Abdullah University of Science and Technology (KAUST) in Thuwal, Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. KAUST focuses its research in disciplines such as energy and the environment, water desalination, industrial biotechnology, engineering, nanotechnology, and mathematics and computational scientific computing.

Karen Fraizer Alston ’94 has been named the Director of Business Operations for the Global Collaborative Research (GCR) Division of the King Abdullah University of Science and Technology (KAUST) in Thuwal, Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. KAUST focuses its research in disciplines such as energy and the environment, water desalination, industrial biotechnology, engineering, nanotechnology, and mathematics and computational scientific computing.

Karen Fraizer Alston ’94 has been named the Director of Business Operations for the Global Collaborative Research (GCR) Division of the King Abdullah University of Science and Technology (KAUST) in Thuwal, Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. KAUST focuses its research in disciplines such as energy and the environment, water desalination, industrial biotechnology, engineering, nanotechnology, and mathematics and computational scientific computing.
An Update from Kimberly Moore ‘94 in Kosovo

The Government of Kosovo and the Office of State Prosecution, with the support of the U.S. Embassy and OPDAT Resident Legal Advisor (RLA) to Kosovo Kimberly Moore ’94, marked October 17-23, 2010, as its first annual National Crime Victims’ Rights Week. The week’s activities culminated in three National Crime Victims’ Rights Ceremonies in Pristina, Gjilan, and Gjakova, attended by approximately 450 representatives from Kosovo’s institutions, professional associations, and the community. This year’s theme was “Crime Victims’ Rights: Fairness. Dignity. Respect.” Guest speakers for the ceremonies included Acting President Jakup Krasniqi, State Prosecutor Ismet Kalashki, and Deputy Chief of Mission Michael Murphy, United States Attorney George Holdring (Eastern District, North Carolina), and Director of the National Center for the Prosecution of Child Abuse Susanara Tiapulis, RLA Kimberly Moore, European Union Rule of Law Mission in Kosovo judges, and local domestic violence and war crime victims. The idea for a Kosovo National Crime Victims’ Rights Week and Candlelight Observance Ceremony was formed in April 2010, when OPDAT sent 23 Kosovo prosecutors, police officers, victim advocates and service providers to Raleigh, NC and Washington, DC, where they received training on a wide variety of issues related to victims’ rights and attended the U.S. Department of Justice National Crime Victims’ Rights Candlelight Observance Ceremony. At the end of the training, the participants decided to create a National Crime Victims’ Rights Ceremony in Kosovo to highlight the plight of victims.

M. King Prather ’97, has been named as Senior Vice President, General Counsel and Corporate Secretary at Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina (BCBSNC). In addition to his duties managing the Law Office at BCBSNC, Prather will oversee the company’s Audit and Risk Management function, Special Investigations and Fraud Unit, Enterprise Security and Privacy department, and Contract Analysis and Negotiation unit.

Brian Beverly ’95, an attorney at the law firm of Young Moore and Henderson, was selected for inclusion in the North Carolina Super Lawyers for 2011.

Tina Herbert ‘00, was elected President of the South Carolina Bar’s Young Lawyers Division in 2010.

Ryan Oxendine ’00, recently joined Herring Mills & Kram, PLLC in Raleigh, NC. Mr. Oxendine will concentrate his practice in the areas of Commercial Real Estate and Business/Corporate Law.

Brenda Branch ’01, Chief District Court Judge, District 6A (Habifco County), was awarded the Citizen Lawyer Award at the North Carolina Bar Association Annual Meeting in Wilmington, NC on June 25, 2010.

D. Tony Pinkston ’04, has been appointed to the position of Managing Attorney in the Legal Aid of North Carolina (LANC) Office in Fayetteville, NC.

Rikesia Williams ’04, was named staff attorney in the LANC Office in Fayetteville.

William S. Eubank II ’07, an attorney in the LANC Office in Fayetteville, was named staff attorney in the LANC Office in Fayetteville.

William S. Eubank II ’07, an attorney in the LANC Office in Fayetteville, was named staff attorney in the LANC Office in Fayetteville.

Lori Warlick ’07, joined the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) in September of 2007, as a law clerk at the Miami Immigration Court. She later joined DOJ’s Office of Immigration Litigation in Washington, D.C. as an appellate practitioner. She has filed briefs in the Second, Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, and Eleventh Circuits. Lori is currently on a one-year detail to the Guantanamo Bay Habeas Litigation Unit, a part of DOJ’s Federal Programs Branch, appearing before the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. She was admitted to the U.S. Supreme Court Bar on November 10, 2010.

Douglas E. Nauman ’08, is a partner with the firm of Daggett, Shuler, Keatman, Nauman & Bell, PLLC in Winston-Salem, NC, where he practices personal injury and insurance law.
Amanda G. Presson ’09, has been promoted to Captain in the United States Army JAG Corps. Presson is stationed at Fort Seward, GA working as a Legal Assistance Attorney.

Samantha J. Younker ’09, recently joined the Janvier Law Firm PLLC in Raleigh, NC. Ms. Younker is practicing in bankruptcy law.

Eric C. “Clifton” Williams ’09, is the University Records Officer in the Office of the General Counsel at North Carolina State University. His primary responsibility is coordinating NCSU’s public records program. He also coordinates NCSU’s response to subpoenas, search warrants, and court orders. In addition, Williams acts as primary advisor to the university on FERPA (student records privacy law) and HIPAA (health records privacy law) in the university setting.

Quintin M. McGee ’10, has joined the Lewis E. Waddell, Jr. Law Office in Newton, NC as an Associate Attorney. McGee earned a B.A. in Economics with a second major in Management from UNCG in 2007. A native of Statesville, NC, McGee resides in Iredell County.

Precious Green ’10, was recently named Staff Attorney in the Office of Legal Aid of North Carolina (LANC) in Fayetteville, NC.

Donna Blyskal ’10, recently joined the firm of Herring Mills & Kran, PLLC in Raleigh, NC. Ms. Blyskal is practicing family law.

IN MEMORIAM

Charles B. Markham
NCCU Professor of Law ’76 - ’83
March 22, 2010

James L. Griffin ’92
March 28, 2010

Timothy C. Cole ’99
December 23, 2010

IN MEMORIAM

Donald L. Murphy ’76 made a provision in his estate planning to leave a generous gift of $30,000 to the School of Law’s general fund. The gift was received on November 20, 2010. In keeping with his wife Sybil’s wishes, the date the gift was received coincided with the one-year anniversary of his passing. Murphy, a double eagle, graduated from NCCU with a degree in Sociology in 1973 and juris doctor degree from the Law School in 1976. Student support programs that will benefit from this gift include the Bar Stipend Program, Wellness Emergency Loans, and the Annual Professional Dinner.

Calling All Alumni to Make a Financial Contribution in Support of the NCCU School of Law

Now more than ever your financial contribution to the School of Law is essential to our remaining a Leader in Legal Education. Your support directly impacts the availability of scholarships, student events, emergency loans, faculty recruitment, special projects, and many essential operating needs for which state funds are not available.

Our Alumni Participation Rate (APR) goal this year is 20 percent. To reach this goal we need 595 alums to contribute by June 30, 2011. To date, we have received 252 alumni contributions. Last year, we reached a record 17 percent and we can make this year’s goal with your participation.

Why Participate?
The Alumni Participation Rate (APR) is widely used to measure the value alumni place on their education and the financial health of the institution. Employers, prospective students and grant-making foundations look to alumni giving rates as evidence of student satisfaction and an indication of the prestige of a college or university. Every gift—regardless of size—shows support for the great education the NCCU School of Law provides!

Show your Legal Eagle pride by making a contribution today online at http://web.nccu.edu/law, by mailing your contribution to NCCU School of Law Development Office 640 Nelson Street Durham NC 27707, or by calling Sharon Alston at 919-530-5386. Thanks in advance for helping to reach the NCCU School of Law Alumni Participation Rate Goal.
DONOR LIST

$10,000+ more
Clifton Johnson ’67 Estate
Steven Smurthwaite
School Scholarship Fund, Inc.
The Foulon Group, Inc.
William P. H. Mallin Foundation

$9,999-$5,000
Anonymous
Cheyenne, Clemmons & Peacock, PA
Marvin Genzer
Craig Kabatchnick
Marvin Genzer
Randal Hayes ’71
David Green
Kenneth Gibbs ’94
John Garland
Mollie Featherstone
William Dudley ’76
Donna Douglas ’84
Sammie Chess ’58
Helen Chavious
John Carter ’79
Danielle Bennett ’99
Clark Bell ’83
Cheryl Amana
$2,499-$1,000
Samuel Popkin ’77
Perry Paylor ’93
Parker Poe Adams & Leroy Johnson ’57
Atiba Adams ’96
$4,999-$2,500
School Scholarship Fund, Inc.
Clifton Johnson ’67 Estate
The Freelon Group, Inc.
Insurance

$999-$500
D. Randall Cloninger ’88
Henry Campen ’86
Norman Butler ’78
Atiba Adams ’96
$999-$500
Samuel Goren ’75
Pamela Glean ’80
Reuben & Pamela Young ’85
James Williams ’79
Fred Whitfield ’88
Mark Webbink ’94
Monte Watkins ’84
Twiggs, Beskind, Strickland & Willingham
William Thomas ’79

$99-$500
Asha Adams ’96
James Beckwith
Vivian Beene ’75
Norman Burke ’78
Francois Byram ’82
Henry Campen ’86
Vernon Carter
Ira Clemen ‘94
D. Randall Cloninger ’88
Lauren Collins
Susan Dunn
D. Randall Cloninger ’88
Nunnally & Wands Garrett ’86
Joseph George
Pamela Glean ’80
Samuel Green ’75

$4,999-$2,500
Litigation

$4,999-$2,500
Arthur Adams ’96
Ronald Douglas & Wanda Bryant ’82
Larry Johnson ’57
NC Institute of Minority Economic Development
Parker Poe Adams & Randal Hayes ’71
PPF Paylor ’93
Samuel Popkin ’77

$1,000-$500
Lawyers Mutual Liability Insurance
Mark Travis

$1,000-$500
Wilson Hyman ’92
Delores James
Leonard Jermain ’76
Grady Jopson ’86
Dela Kendall ’97
Eleanor Kinnard ’92
Arnold Locicero ’73
Susan Marr ’84
James Martin ’75
Michael McCraw ’76
McGuire Woods LLP
Angela Melver ’81
Neely Mypr ’81
Gordon Myers
Jane Peace ’98
Raymond Pierce
Packie Family Foundation
Karen Precon
Karen Pros ’75
Herbert Richardson ’76
Wendy Scott
Geoffrey Simmons
Macra Sloan ’79
The Winston-Salem Foundation
William Thomas ’79
Twiggs, Bostick, Strickland & Ralph Lyon, PA
Mote Works ’84
Mark Webbink ’94
Fred Whitefield ’88
James Williams ’79
Rabin & Pamela Young ’85

$500-$100
Robert Austin
William Austin ’77
Geoffrey Ader ’93
Glenn & Gale Adams ’94
Benjamin Allen ’79
Wanda Allen-Alvah ’89
Peachy Alston ’94
Karen Preston & Alston ’74
Edward Anderson ’76
Melissa Anderson ’08
Charleston Armstrong ’96
Garratt Arth ’08
Nita Asher ’06
John Arkins
David Badger
Barbara Baker ’85
Lloyd Ballance ’88
Macci Bollard
Ronald Barber ’70
Michael Barlow ’98
Adria Bann ’99
Selce Bradely ’91
Brandon Bell ’98
Richard Bell ’99
Cindy Benoit ’97
Albert Bondoff ’33
Riley Bong ’99
Dorothy Boreland ’76
Augustus Black ’88

$250-$100
Richard Gauder ’87
Irene Halniglit
Charles Holmes ’75
William Holmes ’76
Janice L. Mills
Scholarship Concert
Deborah Jeffress ’76
James Lamb ’86
Fredrick Lane ’95
Mark Locicero ’93
Greg Mallard
Adrienne Meddock ’91
Mark & Angela Morris ’82 & ’93
Camyla O’Garro-Moore ’87
Jason Parker ’79
Nathan Peater ’77
Steven Richards ’96
Melina Blase-Lane ’95
A. Leon stealback ’68
Sharon Turner ’95
William Webb

$100-$50
Donald Axtos
William Austin ’77
Geoffrey Adair ’93
Glen & Gale Adams ’94
Benjamin Allen ’79
Wanda Allen-Alvah ’89
Peachy Alston ’94
Karen Preston & Alston ’74
Edward Anderson ’76
Melissa Anderson ’08
Charleston Armstrong ’96
Garratt Arth ’08
Nita Asher ’06
John Arkins
David Badger
Barbara Baker ’85
Lloyd Ballance ’88
Macci Bollard
Ronald Barber ’70
Michael Barlow ’98
Adria Bann ’99
Selce Bradely ’91
Brandon Bell ’98
Richard Bell ’99
Cindy Benoit ’97
Albert Bondoff ’33
Riley Bong ’99
Dorothy Boreland ’76
Augustus Black ’88

$50-$10
Harold Ensetche ’97
Pravina Evans ’93
Delores Evans ’93
Jay Evans ’95
Yves Evans
Ronald Fairbanks ’92
James Favor ’97
Deidre Faison ’90
Kelly Ferrara
Russell Ferguson ’08
Susan Finch ’07
Johanna Finkelstein ’94
Wallace Fransier ’87
David Flammier ’08
Risk Fleming ’01
Paul Fialos
Pamela Ford ’99
Jeanne Ford ’98
Richard Fous ’73
Ira Fous ’88
Constance Foster ’92
Ira Fous ’88
Cheyne Foster ’04
Linwood Fort ’87
Anthony Fox ’82
Kevin Fox ’94
Bertye Franks
Christina Freeman ’98
Cilia Fry ’06
A. Root Edmundson ’76
Shelley Edwards
Barrie Edwards ’94
Kathryn El ‘90
Cherita Ellison ’03
Brian Elson ’99
Lawrence Emma ’74
Dominique Emmansuel ’01
Kelly Emmon ’15
Harold Epps
Janine Evans
Elisabeth Evern

$50-$10
George Glenn ’82
Pravina Evans ’93
Delores Evans ’93
Jay Evans ’95
Yves Evans
Ronald Fairbanks ’92
James Favor ’97
Deidre Faison ’90
Kelly Ferrara
Russell Ferguson ’08
Susan Finch ’07
Johanna Finkelstein ’94
Wallace Fransier ’87
David Flammier ’08
Risk Fleming ’01
Paul Fialos
Pamela Ford ’99
Jeanne Ford ’98
Richard Fous ’73
Ira Fous ’88
Constance Foster ’92
Ira Fous ’88
Cheyne Foster ’04
Linwood Fort ’87
Anthony Fox ’82
Kevin Fox ’94
Bertye Franks
Christina Freeman ’98
Cilia Fry ’06
A. Root Edmundson ’76
Shelley Edwards
Barrie Edwards ’94
Kathryn El ‘90
Cherita Ellison ’03
Brian Elson ’99
Lawrence Emma ’74
Dominique Emmansuel ’01
Kelly Emmon ’15
Harold Epps
Janine Evans
Elisabeth Evern

Legal Eagle Club Membership, July 1, 2009–June 30, 2010. This list acknowledges members of the NCCU Legal Eagle Club, the membership body of alumni and friends who support the Law School. Thank you for remembering the Law School in your charitable giving plans.

If you have supported the Law School during this time and your name is not listed, please accept our sincere apologies and notify Sharon D. Alston in the External Relations office at 919 530 5386 or salston@ncwu.edu.
A TIME FOR GIVING

SCHOLARSHIPS:

Marin Kaplan ’97
Adam Keith ’09
Mimi Kincaid ’06
Hanan Kingsbury ’14
John Kirkman ’76
Lisa Kostim ’07
Barbara Lagmian ’09
Shelia Lambert
Laura Lamin ’93
DeWarren Langley ’11
Lydia Lavelle ’93
Lewis Lawrence ’76
Randal Lee ’99
Jennifer Lee ’01
Stacy Lee ’09
Kelle Loga ’09
Merr Leland ’01
Ola Lewis ’60
Holly Lewis
Floord Lewis ’75
Hugh Lewis
Wendy Lindberg ’09
William Lloyd ’87
Michael Lockridge ’02
Lisa Logan ’09
Karen Long
Chance Lynch ’09
Peter Mack ’93
Joshua Malcolm ’94
Vincent Mabou ’69
Devin Martin ’95
Jeffrey Martin 84
Laura Martin ’08
Rober Marl ’96
Michael Mason ’74
Nancy Mayer ’06
David McCaula ’08
Jo Ann McCain ’90
Lindsey McCargo

Steven McCloudy ’99
Robert McDuffie 81
William McFadden ’79
Lindsey McKee ’08
Marie McKinnon ’00
Frankie McLean ’09
Darrell McMillan ’97
Bashanna McNamee-Wright ’92
Walter McRae ’81
Alan McIntyre ’88
Lawrence McSwain ’79
Staci Meyers ’90
Joyce Michaux ’76
Della Michaux
June Michaux
Tessieha Mike ’08
Geraldine Miller
Titchia Mitchell ’11
Joseph Minchinh ’76
Lynne Molsfeld ’92
Reginald Membro ’88
Vaughn Monroe ’83
William Moore ’91
Patricia Moore
Lisa Morgan
Fonzi Morris-Shepard ’92
Anthony Morrow ’09
Cartin Moore ’99
Victer Mosley ’81
Stephen Monta ’02
Jennifer Sullivan Manford ’00
David Murray ’88
Thomas Namu ’08
Thomas Nagle ’12
Robert Oast
Krisen Oberg ’99
Robert Oden ’96
Nina Ohion ’91
Robert Orr
Hugo Owens ’82
Susan Owens
Stefanie Rodriguez ’88
James Rogers ’87
Gerald Rush ’75
James Palmer ’92
Regina Parker ’92
Sarah Parker
Jason Parker ’79
Vadrick Parker ’04
E. F公安
Helen Parsonage ’96
Timothy Pani
Frank Parson
Christopher Peffley ’04
William Peersong ’90
Alexander & Nichelle Perry ’93
Timothy Proven ’94
Adrian Phillips ’93
Ben Phillips ’86
D. Pinkerton ’94
Marshall Pinto ’80
Ronald Pinner ’09
Harold Pope ’83
Cindy Phipps-Braddy ’91
Page Porter
Cheryl Pugh ’07
Tiffany Pouten ’96
Anita Powers-Branch ’84
Kari Preston ’06
Eric Pridgen ’03
David Prince ’76
George Proddun ’81
E. Yvonne Pagh ’73
Lydia Purvis
Debra Quigly ’89
Micah Ragland ’96
Angie Redlin
Robert Raymond ’81
Harvey Raynor ’80
Daniel Read
Johnston Realy
David Reddin ’89
Brenda Reddix-Small
Brandi Reeves ’08
Gloria Rember
Larry Rembert
James Rich ’77
Paul Richardson ’99
Thomas Ring
Edward Roberts ’90
Franklin Robinson ’93
Stephanie Robinson

Maria Whites ’92
Willa White ’09
Conni Whitenet ’95
Lynn Whitted ’94
Lelei Widdick ’83
Myra Wilkins ’06
Royo Williams
Sheron Williams
Andra Williams ’99
Joyce Williams ’01
Fred Williams
Syrena Williams ’06
Eric Williams ’99
Caroline Williamson ’96
William White ’89
Doby White ’86
William Wilson ’76
Lawrence Wittington ’84
Steven Woodard ’76
Trish Way ’87
Donald Wright ’76
Mary Wright
Tama Young ’94
Anonymous
Bank of Asheville
Black Political Caucus
Charlotte-Mecklenburg Committee to Restore & Preserve
Third Ward, Inc
Controllable Law Group PA
New Beginnings Community Church
Smoot LLC
UGSOA Local #40
UNC School of Government

ENDOWMENTS:

New Horizons Endowment
Law School Reunification Fund
Legal Writing Program
Student Affairs
Evening Program

EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS:

Dispute Resolution Program
Biotechnology and Pharmaceutical Law Institute
Frederick Kennedy Spradling Business
Entrepreneurship Fund
Intellectual Property Law Program
Law Clinic Program
Law School Library
Most Court Board
Performance Based Aids
Program
Public Interest Law Program
Trial Advocacy Board

ENDOWMENTS:

NCCU School of Law Annual Fund
NCCU School of Law Annual Fund
NCCU School of Law Annual Fund
NCCU School of Law Annual Fund

ENDOWMENTS:

William Young ’91
Mary Wright
Trish Wray ’07
Stephen Woodard ’76
Lawrence Wittenberg ’84
Steven Woodard ’76
Trish Wray ’07

ENDOWMENTS:

William Young ’91
Mary Wright
Trish Wray ’07

ENDOWMENTS:

William Young ’91
Mary Wright
Trish Wray ’07
Redressing the Wronged
well as the law school. The Civil Litigation Clinic looks forward to continuing its strong tradition of providing students with the skills and knowledge necessary to successfully practice law in the Twenty-First Century and giving access to justice to those who need it most.
Gregory Malhoit
Civil Litigation Clinical Supervising
Attorney
B.A., History, Midland Lutheran College
J.D., University of Nebraska School of Law

Transforming Lives
Beyond the Courtroom
verbal commitment to assist one to two clients on a pro-bono basis each year after they become licensed attorneys.
Nakia Davis ’01
Family Law Clinical Supervising Attorney
B.A., University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
J.D., North Carolina Central University School of Law

Making a Positive Difference with a Family in Crisis
it to the court (my very first court appearance). I drafted an Answer and Counterclaims to preserve our client’s rights in the event that the parents would not resolve their issues.
Ultimately, the husband voluntarily dismissed his claim for custody and moved back home. The counseling helped him and his wife communicate better about raising their children. Though they continue to go to counseling and I am sure it has taken work, we actually helped to rebuild a broken family. It proved to me that not all family law practice is divorce and fighting over children and property. It proved that I can make a positive difference. It is the reason I know I chose the right path when I decided to go to law school, and it is the reason that I highly recommend the Family Law Clinic course at the NCCU School of Law.

Adjuncts Adding Value to the Law School Experience
have enabled us to develop an intensive three-year
Legal Writing Program.
NCCU Law School applauds the contribution of our adjunct faculty to the success of our students and in the elevation of the Law School’s profile in the academic and legal communities.
Wendy Brown Scott
Associate Dean for Academic Affairs and Professor of Law
B.A., Harvard University
J.D., New York University

Deria Hayes ‘98
Domestic Violence Clinical Supervising
Attorney
B.S., North Carolina Central University
School of Business
J.D., North Carolina Central University
School of Law

Redressing the wronged

Transforming Lives
Beyond the Courtroom

Making a Positive Difference with a Family in Crisis

Adjuncts Adding Value to the Law School Experience

NCCU Law School of Counsel