IMPORTANT NOTICE FOR STUDENTS INTERESTED IN ADR SPRING 2000

The ADR course offered in the Spring 2000 semester is the two-hour ADR Clinic, not the three-hour ADR classroom course. Please read the following description carefully to determine whether your schedule can accommodate the demands of the ADR Clinic.

First of all, students will receive an intensive 40-hour training program in Basic Mediation, Arbitration, Collaborative Law and related subjects. The training is provided by the staff of Carolina Dispute Settlement Services, Inc. (CDSS). The training will take place Tuesday through Saturday, January 2 through January 6.

The sessions will begin 8:00 A.M. each day and run until 5:30 PM with a break for lunch. Punctuality and attendance at all training sessions is mandatory.

During the regular semester, the class will meet for one hour per week.

Beginning the week of January 8, students will rotate through the District Court Mediation Program in Wake County. Initially, students will be supervised by attorney-mediators or experienced non-attorney volunteer mediators and will act as observers or co-mediators in district court criminal matters. District Court is held on Mondays and Fridays only. There is a morning and an afternoon session on Monday and a morning session on Friday. Students are required to spend no less than five sessions in district court, participating in at least 6 mediations. Morning sessions of District Court begin at 9:00 AM and adjourn about 12:00 noon. After court, we will return to the office of CDSS for discussion and debriefing. Thus, students should plan to spend approximately 4 ½ hours, from 8:45 AM to about 1:00 PM, at the morning sessions. Afternoon sessions of court begin at 2:00 PM and adjourn at 5:00 PM. It is not uncommon for a mediation to extend beyond 5:00. Students should plan to spend at least 3.5 hours, roughly from 1:45 to 5:15, at the afternoon sessions.

Judges and District Attorneys rotate through the Wake County "peoples' court" where these mediations are done, and there is no standard procedure for assigning cases to mediation. Usually the DA will screen the cases on the docket after the calendar call for ones that are suitable for mediation. He then turns them over to the mediators and the cases are mediated in the small rooms adjoining the courtroom. Some judges will encourage the parties to consider mediating their cases, others make no effort to do so. There have been days when no cases were referred to mediation and days when there were more cases than mediators. There is simply no way to predict how many cases will be available on any given day. Friday mornings are often less busy than Monday mornings, but not always. Inevitably, students will spend more than a few hours sitting in court waiting for something to happen. Even those hours, however, have considerable educational and entertainment value.

Students must participate in no less than six district court mediations, and must be the "lead" mediator in at least two. One of the goals of the course is to bring students to a level of competence that will permit them to be certified by CDRS to serve as volunteer mediators in District Court.

Students will also have a chance to mediate cases in Durham County Court. The program in Durham is still in the developmental stage, so students should plan on coming to Raleigh for most of their cases.

A number of other ADR programs are handled at the Raleigh and Durham offices of CDSS. They include: felony and juvenile drug treatment courts, which employ a "therapeutic justice" model in drug offender cases; family mediation; Attorney General consumer complaints mediations; District Court arbitration; and Separating Together, a collaborative law approach to separation and divorce. Students are encouraged to observe or to participate in these programs as caseloads and scheduling permits.

Any second or third-year student may register for ADR Clinic. The ADR course is not a prerequisite, nor are students who have taken ADR foreclosed from taking the clinic. Enrollment is absolutely capped at 16 students. In the event of over subscription, preferences will generally be given to upper classmen, and final enrollment will be fixed no later than December 7.

To summarize, you must be at the Law School by 8:00 AM on January 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6, attend all day, every day, spend at least five sessions in district court, do at least 6 mediations and take lead in two of those. In addition, class will meet one hour per week.

See Professor Morris with questions.
